CO-PROCESSING

ABSTRACT

A method of co-processing includes connecting an interface of a first processor to an interface of a second is 5   configurable to place the second processor in a slave processing mode or a master processing mode. The method also includes sending a task from the first processor to the second processor through the bus. The task includes an instruction that places the second processor in a slave processing mode.

10